

The public communication networks in this country (FCC), supported by political interest and members of government, have enough power and influence as it is. I chose to purchase XM satilite radio for various reasons. The key words are "purchased and chose", based on what they had to offer vs what I received that I had no choise in. I can't see how the FCC has any right to determine what should be my free choice of broadcasting I prefer to listen to. Although I do not use the traffic and weather channels, I am still paying for the right to have this information if I choose. Again, I'm even "paying" for this right.
